

Mel Holtz grew up in Billings, Montana and moved to the Missoula area in 1997 to attend the University of Montana. He graduated with a degree in Business Administration but soon realized that his true interests lied in emergency services. He fell in love with Western Montana and chose to remain in the area after graduating. Mel has been a volunteer firefighter since 2004 and an EMT since 2005. He has gained EMT experience working for the Missoula Ambulance Service and Saint Patrick's Hospital as an Emergency Room Tech. In addition to working in the Emergency Room he worked as an EKG tech in the Nuclear Medicine department. Mel is married and has a five-year-old son named Caleb.

In his spare time he enjoys the outdoors and camping with the family.
